Korokh was an attraction at the Zoo from 1943 to 1951. The name Korokh is a Russian name meaning "thunderbolt". Biography He was born on January 10, 1935. He was the son of Chimpanzee Mum and Chimpanzee Dad and he was born to the third chimpanzee mom in an artificial incubator. He was one of only seven chimpanzees born at the San Francisco Zoo during the 1930s. Korokh was the first chimpanzee in the United States to be filmed naked. As he matured, Korokh developed a preference for grapes. An apple tree was planted in his enclosure to supply him with apples. During World War

II, Korokh was interned by the United States Army in a San Francisco military camp for members of the Japanese Imperial Army. As US soldiers were placed in internment camps, Korokh was temporarily left without any living humans. In 1944, he was relocated to a zoo in Spokane, Washington; the next year, he was transferred to the Pittsburgh Zoo. Korokh retired from public view in 1951. He died at the age of 25. In 1960, he was buried at the zoo. He was the last known Great Ape to have lived in captivity to have died in captivity, and was the last of the original three male chimpanzees in the United States to do so.
