1. 1. Check that you are working in the RGB color mode that matches the camera used to record the image. The Camera Raw screen may have been preselected from the JPEG in Capture (see the preceding section, and see also Figure 10-7). If not, select it from the File File Mode drop-down menu. Figure 10-10 provides a quick visual guide. Figure 10-10. Top: As shown here, the RGB color mode is selected from the File Mode drop-down menu if the Camera Raw screen is open. This is generally the case when you are recording RAW images. Bottom: This image was captured in the SDR Color space, but it is displayed in a grayscale (spot color) mode. 2. 2. Click OK to open the dialog box shown in Figure 10-11. Figure 10-11. The Resample Image dialog box. 3. 3. Type a new resolution in the Width and Height fields (either to the left of the resolution measurement, or as the default, as shown in Figure 10-11). If the new resolution is lower than the highest image resolution, the image will appear too small when opened. You can use the megapixels value of the camera to set the new image resolution. The higher the value, the bigger the image will be when you open it. 4. 4. Click the Preserve Aspect check box to preserve the aspect of the image when resized. The aspect of an image, such as how the image is cropped, has no bearing on the final image quality in the product because it is already preserved in the raw image. 5. 5. Click the Crop box (that is, the Boundary box) to crop off the edges. 6. 6. Click Resample Image, or press Enter. Photoshop resizes the image and places a blank white area around the edges of the image. 7. 7. When resizing, be sure to click Resize Down if your new image resolution is higher than the original, or use the Free Resize tool to enable scaling and cropping. If you click OK, a menu opens where you can choose to open the image in Photoshop as a new, background-transparent image or as a new layer. A note appears stating that the Resize Image operation will place a copy of the image

Sri Lankan President Maithripala Sirisena speaks during a UNMOW General Assembly meeting in New York City, New York, U.S., September 29, 2019. REUTERS/Shannon Stapleton COLOMBO (Reuters) - Sri Lanka will withdraw all its troops from the Indian Ocean island of Puntland, President Maithripala Sirisena said in a letter dated Thursday, as tensions rise in the disputed territory's boundary. The government had proposed setting up a demilitarized zone along the frontier. India has dismissed the plan as unacceptable, and on Monday sent troops into Puntland to reinforce its position. "We would like to inform you that the Sri Lankan government has decided to withdraw all its troops from the region of Puntland," Sirisena said in the letter, dated Thursday. "We therefore request the government of India to reconsider and accept the guidelines agreed to by the United Nations in 2007... in order to ensure security and stability in the region," the letter said. India has been working to strengthen its territorial claims in the region, which was once a British colony and is now administered by an autonomous entity and home to over one million people. The country says it is just exercising its sovereign right to defend its interests, but some analysts believe it wants to prevent China from establishing itself in the sea and building artificial islands. India has deployed naval vessels and air force in the region as well as beefed up its coastal patrols, which has raised tensions with China and led to several skirmishes in the past years. The Indian armed forces have deployed two warships and more than 100 on coverage and that coverage was used by Wagner to influence the response to the Plaintiffs' grievance. In my view, the evidence adduced at the evidentiary hearing establishes the existence of a causal connection between Brian Wagner's alleged retaliatory conduct and the Plaintiffs' filing of their grievance. Accordingly, I would hold that a material issue of fact exists regarding whether Brian Wagner's alleged retaliatory conduct was a substantial motivating factor in a covered event, namely the Plaintiffs' filing of a grievance. Therefore, I would conclude that summary judgment cannot be granted to Brian Wagner on the Plaintiffs' retaliation claim. For the reasons stated, I respectfully dissent. NOTES [*] Justice BENDER would have granted review. [1] This Court has previously considered a state employee's "fraudulent inducement" claim in an appeal from an order granting the employee's petition to reinstate his disability retirement. See Davis v. Dep't of Corrections, 811 N.E.2d 792, 794 (Ind.2004). But see id. at 797 (Boehm, J., dissenting) ("By implication, the majority allows a state employee to proceed on a separate fraudulent inducement claim in addition to the reinstatement claim contained in the same petition.") (emphasis in original). We also previously considered the issue in an appeal from a separate order granting the state employee's petition for benefits, but the parties appealed separately and we dismissed the appeal without opinion as moot. See Cleland, 796 N.E.2d at 710 (Boehm, J., dissenting). [2] Subsequent to the filing of the Plaintiffs' grievance, the parties entered into an agreement. The Plaintiffs agreed to withdraw their first grievance and the Department agreed to cease its implementation of the bonus plan. See Appellant's App. p. 3. Although, to this day, the bonus plan has not been implemented, it is not a part of this appeal. [3] Although Brian Wagner argues in his Motion to Dismiss that Indiana Code section 4-15-1-7.1 provides the exclusive remedy, Wagner does not present any argument as to why the fraudulent inducement claim is preempted by the Whistleblower Act. Therefore, Wagner has waived the issue. See Edwards v. DeCastro, 832 N.E.2d 1274, 1277 (Ind.Ct.App.2005) ("Issues that
